VOLUME VI

Windsor, Ontario

With the closing of the 1965-1966 school year, we rely on the PEGASUS to record for future reference the highlights of the many important events concluded with the conclusion of the school year.

Today every teenager is fully aware of the necessity of a sound education or the development of skills with which he can be secure in employment, capable of taking his position in society, secure in the knowledge that he is capable of meeting today's needs and capable of retraining for future needs. Only a full education can guarantee this economic happiness.

All at Massey Collegiate have been basking in the sunlight through the winning of 16 Ontario Scholarships by last year's graduates, establishing a record locally and one which few schools in the province, if any, would have bettered.

This was obtained under crowded conditions and under the extended school day, which is a compliment to both the staff and the students.

Our Grade 13 Graduates won scholarships and bursaries to the potential value of $50,000! While Massey is still a young school, being now 6 years old, lacking in the tradition of long established schools, the Grade 13 Graduates have established a tradition for Massey as a scholarship school. We want this tradition above all others. It is our firm conviction that if you hold an ideal before young people long enough, present that ideal strongly enough, they will rise to it.

In September, 1966 we shall be relieved of the crowded conditions and the extended school day. Both staff and students should find the new term more relaxing and less subject to regulatory procedures.

To Mrs. Grossutti, the sponsor teacher of the PEGASUS, the editors and staff, my compliments for another fine yearbook.

To those students graduating from Massey this year, may I say, on behalf of the staff, that your hopes are our hopes; your successes, our successes. As we seek for you a better life, the famous lines of Goldsmith seem most fitting:

"Till fares the land to hastening ills a prey Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

MR. WARD IS LEAVING

How can the student body say good-bye to someone they would never hope to meet officially at school? Yet, when circumstances dictated, and we had to visit Mr. Ward, we soon knew we were meeting a man who did not judge with a black and white justice. Mr. Ward could see the grey.

As Vice-Principal, Mr. Ward dealt mainly with discipline and attendance. Yet, students and teachers alike knew that Mr. Ward, if he possibly could, would lend a hand to assist in any school function. Mr. Ward is a gentleman. Mr. Ward's activities are not confined to school. Since coming to Windsor Mr. Ward has been active in several choral groups, sometimes the conductor, always a member.

'Good-bye' has a certain finality.

We will not say good-bye, but--'til we meet again, in the hope that we shall not have to wait too long.

Staff and students wish you, Mr. Ward, every success as Principal of H. C. I.

EDITORIAL

Are there any among us who have not heard the expression, "Experience is the best teacher."

Is this an all-encompassing, be-on-your-guard, take-care kind of broad admonition, or is it a warm reflection of thought by those who are sincere in their wishes for our happiness and success?

Like the spectrum of unseen colours embodied in glass, it will unveil its mysteries for all who will look and see. Understanding, honesty, patience, loyalty, consideration, interest, concern, and effort are some of the brighter discoveries to be made if we look.

Education is not as simple as the attainment of honours or passing grades in a variety of academic subjects. It isn't simply the means to an end, but the solid foundation on which to build a good life. It enables us to further develop our abilities and skills to take our proper place in society, to contribute to the well being of our community and our country.

The spirit of Massey Collegiate is, in the final answer, the sum total of the respect and enthusiasm shared equally by its teachers and the student body. This two-way street is a good one to walk on, a satisfying and rewarding exercise for all who will share in the work and the benefits.

When the time arrives for us to continue our journey beyond the walls of Massey, let us make certain that through our personal efforts we retain fond, lasting memories brought about by effective contributions to school spirit.

Let us look back with pride; let us look ahead with confidence and determination. "The experience was a good teacher", because we availed ourselves of existing opportunities.

There are many for all of us to share if we look.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The purpose of a school yearbook is something of an enigma. It should, of course, serve as a reminder of the events of a particular school year. Unfortunately, the time that a yearbook is most valuable -- a decade or two after publication -- is also the time when it is most inaccessible, since a yearbook is easily lost or destroyed. But to the lucky person who still possesses his yearbook after fifteen years, it can be a source of enjoyment and enlightenment.

Perusing its pages, the reader comes upon pictures of old friends, enemies and teachers, noticing how they have changed and remembering forgotten incidents. Then he discovers the pages of editorials, where precious particles of wisdom are freely cast about for all to read.

This is, in fact, the purpose of the President's Message. Now, writing a President's Message for a yearbook is very much akin to presenting an eulogy for a man still living. Both contain idealism, both appeal to the emotions, and both are done too early.

To the students reading this book in June of 1966, may I offer my tentative hope that in the past ten months you have contributed to the school a measure of effort that can be of no disgrace to yourself. Although results do not always follow the attempt, satisfaction should. It is my hope, then, that you are satisfied with the year just past.

To those who are reading this book after many years of absence from school, I hope that the memories it provokes are pleasant. Hopefully, you can look back at your years at Vincent Massey, and especially at school year 1965 - 1966, with the knowledge that they were both enjoyable and educational, teaching not only academic facts but lessons in understanding and working with people.

In this regard, I would like to express the desire that future presidents of Massey find that office as rewarding and interesting as I have in this year past.

Graduation

COMMENCEMENT

At the end of each academic year comes the ceremony of granting diplomas and scholastic honours.

On November 27, commencement exercises were held honouring the largest graduating class in Massey's five-year history. There were eighty-six graduates, many with first class honours, sixteen Ontario Scholars including the top student in the city, James Gatrall. Not only is this a shining record in Massey's history but it is the highest number of Ontario Scholars to graduate from one public secondary school (with the exception of selective schools).

The program began with selections from the Massey C.I. Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Purcell. In a procession the graduates and faculty took their places. Then, with O Canada the ceremony began.

Rev. O. Lapp of Gethsemane Lutheran Church led the invocation. Mr. Whetstone spoke a few words of address. Greetings were bestowed on behalf of the Windsor Board of Education by Mr. A. Buchanan and the Suburban Board of Education by Mr. M. McLaughlin.

At last the symbolic culmination of years of work came with the presentation of the diplomas and pins by Dr. T. C. White and Mr. J. Ord. James Gatrall spoke for the graduates in his valedictory address.

A few more selections were performed by the Orchestra. Then the scholarship and bursary winners were introduced. The graduates won a potential of 48,515 in scholarships and bursaries. This was followed by the presentation special and academic awards. Finally, after a rewarding evening the graduates met their families and friends in the cafeteria.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

The farewell, or valedictory was given at commencement this year by Jim Gatrall, an Ontario scholar, and the top student in Windsor. Some excerpts of his address are below.

"Mr. Chairman, Reverend Sir, Platform Guests, Parents, Staff Members, Relatives (including Grandparents, Aunts, Uncles, Cousins, Etc.), Friends, Enemies (from other schools) neutral observers, students and Fellow Graduates and anyone else that I would like to mention but cannot remember right now, who may be seated in our auditorium. (Please pardon the euphemism of that last word.)...

One-fifth of a quarter of a century ago this institution was born at the same time we started high school. We were under the guiding hand of the staff members and senior students who had transferred their loyalties from elsewhere.

During the transition period that followed, both we and the school got older, something new evolved--the beginnings of a true Massey tradition...that nebulous thing we call school spirit...

On what grounds can Massey claim to have school spirit? Well, we have gained the reputation of always fielding hard-nosed and game competitors in any sports endeavour...

It's hard to define school spirit, except to say that it is that quality, without which none of the other facets of school life can function harmoniously. You can see it at work in the smart step of the Cadet Corps at inspection, the fine craftsmanship of the yearbook, and the enthusiasm displayed in productions like the operettas.

Another convention which we stoically accept is our small scale population explosion. In 1960 there were less than 800 students and no Grade 13's. Since then the school population has more than doubled, (although the capacity of the building has not, and each year we have an ever-increasing number of graduates. Looking at the number of Junior matriculation diploma recipients, I fear that next year their parents may have to wait into the wee hours of Sunday morning to see their offspring sprinting across the stage, picking up their diplomas enroute much like runners in a relay race receiving the baton handoff... Our staff, too, are steadily increasing in numbers, and they have a fairly high turnover rate. Either the students are driving them away or else they are using the experience they gained here to continue climbing the ladder of success. Seriously though, the second reason is by far the more frequent, and testifies to the general high calibre of Massey's teaching staff and administration over the years. This year you no longer beat us with wet noodles when you caught us with our homework undone, like you did in the good old days of Grade nine. You presented the course material, helped us with our problems, and inspired us to greater effort. You also transferred the responsibility for our success or failure to our own shoulders, and for these things I thank you.

The response to that challenge brings me to my main consideration, our academic tradition. The record of this class, the first to have come completely through Massey, established a goal for future years to aim at. There were 86 graduates, many with first class honours, sixteen Ontario Scholars, and the top student in the city. They accumulated a possible $48,000.00 towards the furthering of their education.

Obviously they accepted their task seriously, but I would like to ask, was Grade 13 a cram year? I don't think it was. Francis Bacon had this to say about studies in the sixteenth century, "Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability. Their chief use for delight is in privateness and retiring, for ornament, is in discourse, and for ability, is in the judgment and disposition of Business." If we analyze Grade 13 under these criteria, it becomes more than just ten months of fact memorization, although at exam time most of us felt like damned souls. But overall, was there not some sense of satisfaction in solving a difficult Geometry problem on your own or handing in a well-written French essay? The English and History courses sparked many of us who shall remain unnamed to endless hours of heated debate on the nature of God, Man and our society. Just the practical work we did last year is invaluable background material now that we have actually started pursuing our life's goal. Grade 13 has a stimulating, maturing effect and I'm sure most of us came out of it better than we went into it. At any rate we have made our mark.

How does the growth process of a tradition operate? Imagine, if you would, a mountain stream, in which the rock bed represents the school and its customs; and the running water the students. A two-fold transition is always taking place. The pattern of the rocks on the bottom will determine the route of the water. But simultaneously the water will be wearing down the bedrock and charting a new course.

Similarly everything about the tradition established by our seniors those first experimental years influenced us. And what we have done with it will affect the policies of those that follow us. For the water present at time now is the end of all that has gone before, and the beginning of all that has yet to come. And the eroding of the rockbed or the synthesis of the tradition never stops.

Where does this graduating class of 1965 fit into the cycle? I'd like to think that we provided the parent rock with its basic outline of academic excellence and true school spirit. I hope future classes will be proud to accept the tradition which we pass on to them, and that in their hand hands it will continue to grow and improve.

FROM A SECOND STOREY WINDOW

anonymous

The wind blows in at the eaves
And out again; humming, along the wires
Down from the house to poles,
And down the street.

Leaves leap from trees
To catch the wind, a last chance for life,
Then, half-heartedly, the way of the rest,
See-saw to the ground.

They line the gutters, lie in patches Scudding intermittently on whimsical breezes.
Finally they lay sodden, and limp
In autumn dampness.

Thru this lifeless pane
Come not the smells of autumn fires,
The sounds of metal rakes on cement sidewalks,
The delightful chatter, of make-believe families
In make-be-lieve houses.

A dog zig-zags across the lawn,
Sniffing.
He leads his master thru the autumn's gray scene.
It's not autumn! It's spring to them.
Not gray, but vivid yellow and green!
So Young.

He too will build a house,
And, in time, climb its stairs
Look out, thru' the timeless pane
Of his second storey window--
And see the grey autumn.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

Karen Lawrence

they were so friendly at first and then suddenly she was alone....

they taunted her and laughed at her and her child's face was streaked with salty wetness....

they tugged at her dress and she ran from them, crying out wordlessly to the sky

they threw things at her and the sting of a dirty pebble was lost in the burning inside...

they talked together and then looked in her direction and she stood there, twisting and burning inside, ashamed at something,
she knew not what....

they wrote ugly words
on walls
and she walked past, pretending not to see them....

they made fun and laughed and pulled and she, standing alone in the dark corner, could not understand....

she was five and black.

THE STORM

Karen Eberwein

I looked into the sky to see,
The angry clouds move over me,
The air grew still; my heart beat fast;
I knew the storm had come at last.

The lightning flashed, the thunder rolled,
The wind about me grew so cold--
As rain roared down, now Nature's plan,
Fulfills the needs of every man.

MEMORIES

Richard Stewart

He yelled a command for his men to get down quickly as the static rattle of a machine gun split the air and raked the hillside. He hit the rocky ground but not before a few rounds of burning lead had found him.

The pounding of the shells around became the pounding and throbbing of the machines in the factory where he was a foreman. As he walked down the length of the shop wing, friends waved to him and smiled. Even those walking the other way going on shift greeted him. Everyone was his friend; he hadn't an enemy in the world.

As the trolley made its way down the pulsing arteries of the metropolis, he looked out at the towering edifices surrounded by numerous smaller structures.
From where the trolley left him it wasn't more than four blocks through a pleasant park to his home.

The abode, although comparatively small, was better furnished than the average worker's home. Most of the extra work to beautify the dwelling was done by his own two hands with his wife at his side.

Just inside the door awaited a kiss from his wife, always as beautiful as the day he married her. The evening repast prepared by her was something to look forward to with zeal. Later in the evening the two of them would sit and relax, talking quietly over the soft music.

Even though the same routine repeated itself for over two years, neither he nor his wife became tired of it.

But then something happened to change it all. A baby girl filled the evenings with even more enjoyment. He would sit for hours and bounce the baby on his knees and make strange faces and odd noises, all of which both the baby and his wife enjoyed.

As she grew older, he smiled inwardly, proud of that beautiful child with the long, dark, flowing hair and dark eyes of her mother.

Just as she was starting school, war broke out.

It wasn't long before the notice came telling him he was in the army. Drill, drill, and more drill. Each week the training stiffened and he saw less and less of his family.

Then came the orders to go to the South Pacific islands. There, after a few skirmishes with the enemy, his courage and leadership qualities were recognized and he received his rank.

Now he was on Iwo Jima.

Only this morning word had been received that he was now the father of an eight pound, six ounce boy named after his father. The men had congratulated him and for a while all was gaiety, but then came those infernal orders to move out and fight.

A machine gun rattled and he felt burning pain as he hit the rocky ground of that worthless, wretched island.

As he drew his last breath, he overheard a few words in a foreign tongue he knew little about. "There's one more lousy Jap officer gone to meet his ancestors!"

THE MOVIES

Greg Goulin

I was four years old and going to the show (whatever that was) with mother and the two Renaud sisters. The term mother, is used instead of mom, or even "my old lady", because at the age of four, one is in mystic awe of everyone older than himself, mainly because older people are much larger. It is a quality so often lost when one grows taller.

We took the bus. It was a great ride. The unimproved condition of the suburban roads added the flavour of an amusement park roly-coaster to the otherwise ordinary bus. After a terrific ride, the roly-coaster jarred to a halt and we got off. It was great fun to pretend.

A long walk followed. It was almost a whole city block. My chubby little legs were soon turned to spaghetti and I began scuffing my toes. Mother amazingly knew what this signified and whisked me up into her arms. Highly embarrassing to a grown boy of four in front of two grown girls of six and seven. It was comfortable, however, and I soon forgot my pride.

Suddenly, after a short stop, to give something to a lady in a cage, somewhat resembling my Gramma's pet canary, we passed through two sets of gaudy red and orange doors into a great room of night. I was frightened and consequently began to sob. It was immense and the darkness made it ominous and eerie. I was out of my environment. Soon, I was comforted with a sweet. It wasn't just an ordinary sweet. It was special, all gummy and chewy, making your hands and in turn your hair all sticky when you took it out of your mouth to play with it. I think they called it toffee.

Soon, to my surprise, one wall of the vast hall began to glow and funny people began to move across it. It was very interesting. I saw a little fair headed girl swallowed by a keyhole and, then, proceed to fall down into a pit. At the bottom of this said pit, was a beautiful garden like my grandmothers' and I stated the fact. The flowers and animals in the garden started to talk now. Overcome by my past ignorance I resolved to have a good talk with the flowers in Grandmother's garden next time. I never knew they could talk. Pondering this fact, I fell asleep.

Waking up, I found myself in my mother's arms being carried from my seat. As I looked around, I noticed that all the people were climbing a carpeted hill and soon we would too! Oh joy! I couldn't let this opportunity pass by unheeded. I made mother put me down and as soon as we reached that marvellous hill, I joined in the pushing and shoving to reach the top. What an enjoyable game, simply superb!

Upon reaching the top, I noticed the hill sloped down on the other side towards a opening of light. Following the others, I headed towards it. Much to my amazement, I found myself back on the street in front of the gaudy doors through which we had entered.

Wondering how I came to find myself here, I began to question mother. "Mother?" I said. No reply, "Mother?" I repeated rather indignantly. Looking around I discovered mother was nowhere to be found. I had lost her in the crowd and now I was all alone in this strange place, all alone!

Suddenly, some lady passed by me. My face was brushed by her full, calico skirt. The bright colour caught my attention and my confused head followed the woman's flowing skirt down the street. There was something familiar about it. When the woman was about three stores away, it occurred to me that Mother possessed a skirt or dress of just such a cloth. It must be her! Wildly, I ran screaming after the skirt due to my panicked hysteria. The lady in the skirt, mother, turned into a building before I could reach her. I did likewise but there was no calico in sight. Tugging on a few coattails and announcing the basic fact that, "I want my mother," proved of little use until an elderly lady (like Gramma) asked what mother was wearing. Red, I told her. Calico was red at my age, when all was a general dream. Together we found the lady in the calico skirt having her haircut in the mezzanine. I had found my mother. Joyously I ran up to her and wrapped my arms around her looking up into her eyes.

Shocked and dazed I began to scream. The lady I had found was not Mother. But she had to be; she had on a calico skirt. Dazed, I ran out onto the sidewalk again. Finally, fully frustrated, I leaned up against the side of the building and sobbed.

The clicking of a woman's heels and the strange feeling of the ground departing from beneath my feet brought back my senses. It was mother. It had to be. I could feel her warmth. I looked into her face to make sure. Yes, it was mother. She kissed my head as I turned. I hugged her tightly, never wanting to let her go again. She stroked my head and straightened my cap, crying all the while and scolding me at the same time, too, for running away from her in the movies.

I was puzzled. She didn't even have on a calico skirt and besides that, what were the movies?

OCTOBER MORN

Corinne Musgrave

Unpredictable summer trips out of the scene
And goes down south for the winter.
While delicate autumn steals across the open skies-
Puffing a breath of cool air into the October morn.
She spreads a veil of dewy mist
On the tips of the Chrysanthemums,
And whispers to the birds that she has come.
The little animals of the earth hear her footsteps,
And scatter in all directions,
Chattering away their plans for a winter abode.

The green grasses die out, spreading
A cloak of autumn leaves about them.
The delicate mistress of the Fall
Paints a picture of colour all about her
With paint brush in hand, she sprinkles
Golden stardust on the tree tops,
And with a toss of her head,
Everything is coated with tangerine.
She leaves behind, a path of acorns and Frosted pine cones,
As a token of her returning!

WINTER

Ellen Hoffmann

His features frozen-hard and sharp;
No smile lights his gray eyes;
Hoary locks about his head
Like brittle clouds in faded skies,
His lips are pinched
His cheeks sunk deep,
Show hunger there
To take what it may reap.
Soon he dies,
This withered man,
To be buried
By a sorrowing Spring.

Where once the land was neatly ploughed
Now was found a baser furrow,
Of steel, of sand
There men wallowed in mud
And the blood of their comrades.
Where once the proud and haughty eagle hunted
A bird of wire and wood reigned,
Whose cry was likened to a roar
And whose talons were of fire.
Where once the wonders of life and nature unfolded,
Death obscured them;
And she was forced to forsake her love of man.
Where once a bird's song hung in the air;
Now it had gone,
Fled before a multitude of mightier voices.
Where once the dove of peace had reigned,
Greed had usurped his throne,
And with greed had come war.

The Vincent Massey Social Committee staged Massey's first prom of the year on January 28. The theme was "An Evening in New York" with Jack Madden and his orchestra providing the musical entertainment. The huge success of the prom can be attributed to the hard work and late hours contributed by the Social Committee members.

The decorations, which provided the New York atmosphere, were some of the best staged over Massey's short past. Rick Merlo and his committee turned the main lobby into Coney Island with candy booths, a roller-coaster and a merry-go-round. Once inside, you passed the marquee where Larry Burney and his committee had built the entrance, appropriately decorated with a few James Bond girls.

The New York skyline was the work of Susan Collacott and her committee had portrayed on the north wall. The buildings were made realistic by the tin foil windows reflecting the red, blue and yellow spotlights that also shone down Broadway. For it was Broadway that Syril Fogel and her committee chose as the scene on the stage. The fluorescent paints gave the effect of Broadway with its glimmering lights and provocative attractions.

The village came next, complete with art exhibitions and a coffee shop. The brick wall which supported the art gave way to an art building, in itself in the form of a playboy club. Stephanie Young's committee completed the scene with a view from Central Park. Joan McLaughlin's committee arranged tables for a night club effect.

A bouquet of roses was presented to the prom queen Christine Napier by Mr. Whetstone. She was attended by her princesses - Gail Atherton, Susan Cooke, Donna Daragon, Irene Laroche, Gail Nickleson, Sharon Rees, Cheryl Stevens and Suzanne Young. The Queen and her escort led the Grand March, conducted by Mr. Ward, followed by her princesses.

The great success of that prom led to Jack Wilson's idea of having a city-wide prom with all the secondary schools in Windsor sponsoring it. The plans call for a late-June graduation prom to be held at the Cleary Auditorium.

THE ANNUAL ART CONTEST

As you will notice from the title, this event which was instituted 3 years ago by Carter Hoppe is now a strong stone in the firm foundation of our growing school tradition. There was a fair response to the contest as a whole this year but in the oil category the number of paintings and quality on the whole was exceptional. This does not mean to say that what the other categories such as water colour, charcoal and pencils, pastel, and even wood burning lacked in number, they did not make up in fine technique. The only media not represented this year was sculpture.

This year the sponsor teacher was Mr. P. Robert; he and I did the organization and display work. The art was on display only one day this Jan. 29, since the Social Committee decided to take the best works into the Gym to be part of the Prom, Jan. 28, where they did much to enhance the atmosphere. It seems quite appropriate to save these last two lines to thank and extend our appreciation to Mr. Ureckz, Mr. Willard, and Mr. Wier who so kindly donated their time to judge our exhibition.

PUBLIC SPEAKING AND DEBATING CLUB

Although minute in number, the members of this club did their best to develop debating and public speaking talents in Massey. At the beginning of the year, under the guidance of Mr. Steele, the sponsor teacher, a list of aims was developed. Prepared speeches, debates, and discussions were on the programme. Although impromptu speaking was somewhat bypassed, a great emphasis was placed upon prepared speeches and discussions. In the annual WSSA division contest the representatives were Karen Lawrence (Junior Girls), Don Bryant (Junior Boys), Jan Marontate (Senior Girls), and Fred Skeggs (Senior Boys). Karen, Jan, and Fred went on to win the championship for the Western Conference and Dan received honourable mention.

U. N. CLUB

This year, Massey was not only well represented in Football, Basketball and so on, but was superbly represented at the University of Detroit as well. The members of the U. N. Club formed two delegations to attend the Model United Nations at the U. of D.

The Model United Nations is an organization, formed by the students of the University, for the purpose of giving students first-hand experience in the work of the actual United Nations. Every country of the world is represented by one of 117 delegations of high school students from Windsor and Detroit.

This year Massey was chosen to represent Lebanon and Bolivia. The president, Barry Munholland, was head of the first delegation. His compatriots were: Greg Goulin, (Treasurer), Jan Marontate, Fred Skeggs and Bob Doumani (Vice-President). The second delegation was headed by Blake Soutar (Parliamentarian) and Bob Dunlop (Secretary). Their fellow delegates were: Karen Lawrence, Gord Lewchuk and Jeff Konrad.

Many of the club's members were honoured in different ways. Karen Lawrence, Jan Marontate and Fred Skeggs were the W. S. S. A. speech contest winners for Massey this year. This is a good indication of the academic quality of the students in the U. N. Club.

One of these same people, Jan, was selected to represent our school in the trip to New York in which all other Windsor schools take part. During her visit to New York, Jan met some of the Canadian delegates and was shown part of the United Nations buildings. A part of her time was used to see Sammy Davis Jr. in "Golden Boy". All in all, Jan returned loaded with enthusiasm and knowledge. She made it clear that it was a very enjoyable trip. Congratulations Jan!

1965-6 was a very successful for the U. N. Club. On top of all the marvelous students on the delegations there were 13 others of equal ability. No doubt their names will soon be taking the place of the ones mentioned above.

The Hostess Club, open only to Grade 9 girls, started this fall at Vincent Massey Collegiate Institute for the first year. Its purpose was to give the members extra opportunities to develop the skills of entertaining and cooking. Included here were such things as preparing lunches for staff meetings, parties and the prom, serving the lunch at the graduation and entertaining and visiting Hostess Clubs at other collegiates.

The members were divided into groups and had cooking periods once a month, on certain nights, after school. Here they experimented with new recipes and ideas.

Visits to Hostess Clubs at other collegiates throughout the city were also well attended. Field trips to various large hospitals, dairies and restaurants were planned. Here much information and insight into commercial cooking were gained by the members.

In conclusion, we could say, it was a successful opening year! Let's hope that next year sees a Hostess Club at Massey on an even larger scale!!

FOOTBALL

This year the Mustangs had a successful season ending up the year with a 3-3-1 overall record. The team was hampered throughout the season with injuries to key players but still managed to place Greg Topolie on the second All-City team and Pat Sheehan, Steve Hoffman, and Terri Burney on the third team.

The Mustangs were the only team to beat the Walkerville Tartans, City Champs, this fall. The game had been dedicated to the ailing footballer, Carmen Fillmore. This tremendous victory showed the inherent spirit of the young team which should show its powerful head in forthcoming years.

GIRLS' VOLLEYBALL

This year the senior girls went into the semi-finals with a 4:3 (win:loss) record. Due to the fine sportsmanship and skill of all the players we succeeded in setting a new record for Massey. Although defeating such teams as Kennedy and Herman we lost to Walkerville and Patterson. Thanks go to our scorer, timer, and Mrs. Nickson our enthusiastic coach. Mrs. Nickson has already reserved the championship for next year!

SENIOR GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Our Senior Girls' Basketball team put forth great efforts this year and hope to continue to do so. Without the inspired coaching of Mrs. N. Nickson along with tedious teamwork, which was encouraged by the captain, Pat Miller, the team would barely have been recognizable. Although the team was victorious only three times, their hopes of improving are tremendous.

The team, however, is losing valuable Grade Thirteen players, as Gail Nickleson, Linda Moffat, Pat Miller and Liz Budd, but they are to be replaced by many newcomers who will spark the team, we hope, to greater victories.

Other outstanding players were Cathy Gilbert, Irene Binder, who as a newcomer proved very commendable, and Carolyn Fitzpatrick. The guards, who contributed powerfully and held the opponents' scores down, especially against Kennedy and Patterson, were Barbara Boroski, Carol Monforton along with newcomers Linda Wachna and Helen Smith.

Depends on what you do with it! It could become a prize rooster, get top billing in a fricassee—or end up as a splatter on the floor. The possibilities are unlimited—the egg is just a start. Like university. You discover as you go along the endless possibilities an advanced education can bring. But you have to make a start—and not everyone can afford that. That's why the General Motors companies in Canada award 25 scholarships each year ranging in value up to $2,000 to help deserving students. More than 250 scholarships have been awarded since this programme began in 1955. Grants, too, are given to the universities themselves. Students can choose from any of 14 participating universities, pick the faculty they like, prepare in their own way to take their place in Canada's future. Life isn't always served sunny side up—but the GM scholarship plan can help.

Applications for General Motors Scholarships should be directed to the Registrars of the following participating Universities: The University of Toronto; The University of Western Ontario, London; Queen's University, Kingston; The University of Montreal; The University of Manitoba, Winnipeg; The University of British Columbia, Vancouver; The University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon; The University of Alberta, Edmonton; The University of New Brunswick, Fredericton; Laval University, Quebec City; McGill University, Montreal; Memorial University, St. John's, Newfoundland; Dalhousie University, Halifax; and McMaster University, Hamilton.

It's funny how a little piece of paper can put you in a whole new world

Getting your driver's license makes the whole world a brighter place to live in.
You can move.
Without pestering Mom or Dad to drive you.
Without depending on anybody else.
But now a lot of other people are suddenly depending on you.

Not for rides (although you like the feeling when you give somebody a lift).
But for their lives. And their property.
So don't take chances. Don't try to prove anything when you drive—except that you are qualified to do it.
In every way.

RCMP BAND

On Thursday, February 24, 1966, the spacious auditorium of Vincent Massey Collegiate was filled with ear-pleasing sounds. This was the memorable day when the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Concert Band played for the enthusiastic student-body of Massey. The superintendent directed the band. We were favoured by excerpts from "The Sound of Music" and several march numbers. Sergeant Hampson sang "What Kind of Fool Am I". A double quartet sang "Deep River" and "Old Ark's A-Movering".
