Valedictorian Speech

By Erik Yzeiri

I never really understood all those people in movies and clichés who would say "We made it". It always seemed so weird and fake to me. Like "WE MADE IT!"... Of course you did, it's the end of high school, what were they going to do, eternally hold you back? It's not that hard to make it past the finish line. But being 100% honest, it really was difficult. We've all had those days where getting up and convincing yourself to go to school had to be the hardest thing to do. But we all did it. Maybe you did it because you knew you weren't alone and you had a friend waiting for you at school. Maybe you had a test you couldn't miss. Maybe your parents made you go. Even if it seemed like getting up was the worst possible thing to do, we still all did it for our own reasons. And that's why I stand up here grads, confidently saying "We made it". Because I finally understand that we don't say that just because we were ever afraid of not making it. We say it because it's one last final crescendo at the end of this long road of high school that encompasses all the struggles, all the hardships, every single problem we've had to face. It's all represented with "WE MADE IT".

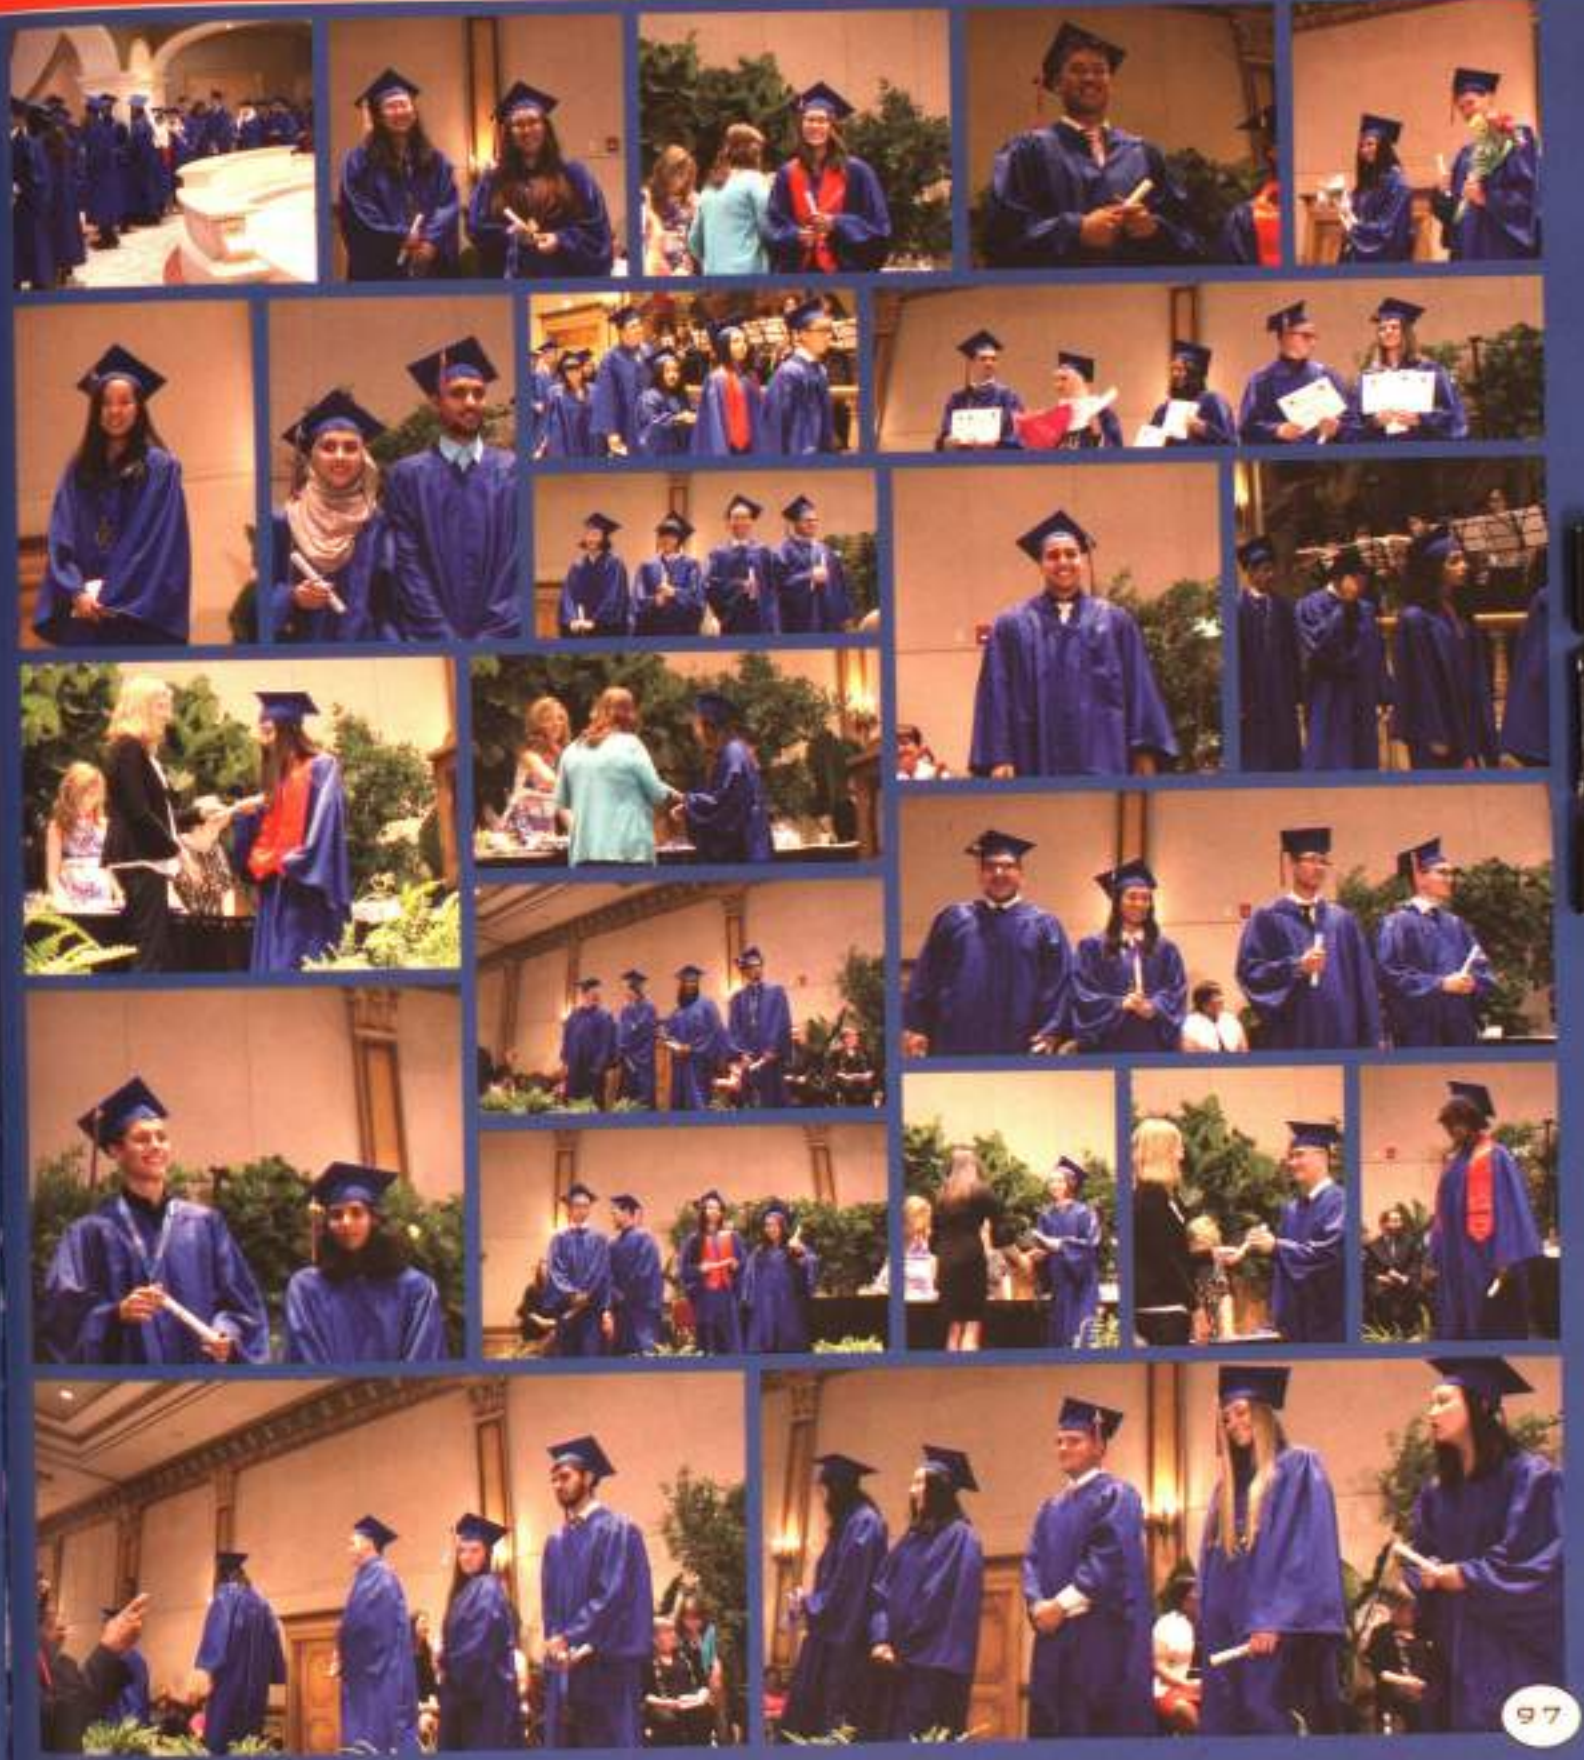

I'm going to talk about some worse moments because we need to get this stuff out of the way. Everyone in this room has tried to put a smile on their face in front of others when they didn't really feel that way. We've had nights where we were exhausted and ready to give up, but we didn't. There were times where life tripped you, and then kicked you while you were down. And you got up, brushed yourself off, and walked it off. Every time life threw something at us, we found a way to brush it off. But there was that one thing. Something that you couldn't deal with. Something that hit you all at once and you couldn't hold on anymore and you didn't know what to do so you just stopped. What I'm trying to say is that life isn't perfect and sometimes it's painful. Do me a favour though and think back to grade 9. How high school was new, scary, and exciting. Now do the same with grade 10 and think about how we were still figuring out how everything worked. And then grade 11 where things seemed to take a very serious step and became much more difficult. And this year where we're not sure what the future holds for us. This isn't meant to depress anyone here or make them feel like high school sucked even if it did sometimes. It's meant to prove an important point that we should always remember in life. Life gets better. To everyone who's been in that dark tunnel of fear and sadness, remember to keep going because there's always a light at the end of that tunnel.

We've all made memes and jokes in our time here with our friends, our classes and our teachers and there are some big highlights. Some of us wrote out the bee movie script and handed it in as homework or posted it on Edsby. Others danced on the vending machines after school. And to all the grade 12 students here who took functions, always remember the TAVOLIERI SPECIAL. All jokes aside, I want to give a nice quick shout out to the teachers. We've had some really amazing teachers who we could always turn to and it's something to appreciate. Everyone's had at least one teacher in the past 4 years who made every day a little easier so please a nice round of applause for the teachers. And moving on from the teachers, a round of applause for all the wonderful parents. They've helped us through thick and thin and made it here with us even if we didn't always agree with them. There's been tons more memorable moments but we'd run out of time and I don't want Mr. Peto reminding me that the hall being empty is what the hall should look like June 27th once graduation ends.

Throughout the 4 years here, we've made some great connections with others. When thinking about the "relationships" made with the people in these past 4 years, it seems as if we've known these people all our lives. These people are the ones who always made us feel like we're not alone. Because we all went through the struggles of high school together. These friends are the ones who we'll remember as we reminisce about high school. If I could stand up here and talk about all the people who I've gotten to know the past 4 years, we wouldn't be leaving until the start of uni. Thank these people guys. Enjoy their company while you still can during this summer. Because these are the people who showed us that we're never alone. I know people say that "high school is a chapter in your life" and "now you're moving on to another chapter" and so on. I don't always like this example because it almost makes it seem like your life is already set in stone. In reality, high school has helped shape and define us into who we are right now and all of this helps tell us what we'll be doing later. It's character development. Because you, each and every one of you, are the main character in your stories. If you don't like who you are, then you change. You hate your story? Do something about it. These stories are constantly being written and rewritten as we live and make decisions and change. Be the main character. Slay that dragon, learn that magic, discover the mysteries of the universe, solve a murder. After all, if you don't live out your story, who will? Thank you.
