When the spirit is strong

there's no hope that's too high,

And a dream can take wing like a bird in the sky.

You hope and you plan and you work all day

And you pay little heed to what doubters may say.

And since we're the Spirit, let's raise a voice to say: Walkerville's on top,

all the way!

SEE MR. AITKEN FOR DECISION MAKIN'!

May I take this opportunity to congratulate you on a most successful year. This past year has seen the development of a new and exciting school spirit. We saw the development of a variety of clubs, the expansion of our intramural program and the involvement of the student body in activities which proved rewarding and encouraging.

To our graduates, may I wish you continued success as you move on to new and interesting careers.

To the Blue and White, may I congratulate you on recapturing for us the many highlights of the school year. For too quickly are our memories numbed and too quickly are our senses dulled, that to reflect back in years to come on the pages of our yearbook is to bring happy moments of our days at Walkerville.

Yes, this was the beginning of complete involvement.

Of late, while researching an historical account of the Windsor Secondary Schools' Association, it has been a great pleasure, as a former student of this school, to examine available copies of the "Blue and White". These editions, dating back to 1930, have provided an excellent source from which to glean portions of Walkerville's athletic past. The many people responsible for producing these yearbooks deserve commendation for their fine contributions to the continuing story of Walkerville Secondary School.

Cavida Dornetta, where are your shoes?

This year has been the "craziest" year that I've spent at Walkerville. Last April, I was asked to be the editor of the Blue & White. These past few weeks, I have often been caught kicking myself for being such a fool as to submit my body to the torment of no sleep and my mind to the anxieties of a rapidly approaching deadline.

When I finish writing this, I will be finished with the yearbook. It seems hard to believe that it is almost completed. When I consider everything that has happened to me as a result of the yearbook, I realize that I have no regrets. Even though I encountered many frustrations while trying to do an often times impossible job, they are the kind of memories which will soon fade.

But I also have the kind of memories that I will always want to look back on - the good times I had working for the Blue & White, the lessons I've learned about people and the friends I've made.

The hardest lesson for me to learn was that I couldn't do everything by myself; I had to depend on others. I don't know what I would have done without Pam DeYoung and Pauline Grech. Not many people have a friend like Pam who will stay up all night to help them get something finished or like Pauline who spent many Sunday afternoons bent over a layout page.

Of course there were more than just three of us working on the Book. Without Dorothy Nielson, the headlines would read "Tennis," "Football", "Math Teachers" etc. and without Peter Channen and Emanuel Rizea, the pages would be blank!

Who can forget the secretaries! Thanks for putting up with me and my frequent requests. (Marilyn, can you please call anyone in SC for grad pictures?) Mr. Aitken also supported us in all our endeavours to raise money (I think I can, I think I can, I think I can get clean at the Blue and White car wash!) and helped us wade through many puzzling situations.

Before I finish I want to thank Mrs. Pac-Urar for her guidance, support, patience and friendship. How she was able to endure seeing the motley crowd of Blue & Whiter every day, hearing "Mrs. Pac-Urar, I need some more money" and listening to Kim and David having their insult fights, I'll never understand. Thanks a million Mrs. Pac-Urar!

I really appreciate everyone who worked on the yearbook and supported me all year! Thanks!

GET IT ON WITH BIG JOHN!

Upon being elected head of the Student Body, I set forth to make my promises become a reality. Through the work of the Student Body, the Inner Executive and the leadership of Mr. J. Curry and Mr. Aitken, I feel I have been successful.

The first few weeks of school seemed very new, since this was the first time I had been involved with the Student Body. But with our Pizza Party, Assemblies and a winning football team, school involvement became a familiar part of my duty. Other activities such as our Hallowe'en Party, Grade twelve and thirteen Graduations and the fund raising Chocolate Bar and Raffle drives have kept the school on its toes for the remaining part of the year.

I will always remember the spirit and determination of the students of Walkerville. Without you, our Agora and the support of our teams would have been a failure.

I have gained personal satisfaction in knowing that I contributed a small part in making Walkerville a better school.

IF YOU'VE GOT COMPLAINTS, HIT THE SAC!

Contrary to popular belief, S.A.C. does not stand for Soup and Crackers. It means Student Affairs Committee. With a common lunch hour this year, many students found that they had a lot of spare time on their hands, so the Student Affairs Committee did something about it. They organized workshops taught by students advanced in a certain area. The workshops were designed to teach the basics to students who knew little about the subject.

The S.A.C. is also a group of students who will take ideas or suggestions to better the school, and try to do something about it. So if you have an idea, don't be afraid to speak up. Remember, don't "bag it", "S.A.C. it!"

KEEPING UP WITH MR. CURRY'S TRADITION

Be quiet, when I am speaking to you

But I didn't mean to do it!

The work put into this year's show was well displayed on opening night. John Bobaljick starred as Tevye, the father of five beautiful daughters, and Mary Gall as the mother. The play was dramatically excellent thanks to the countless hours of training Mr. Curry put with the leads and Mr. Cunningham with the chorus. Mr. Curry beat the orchestra with his baton until they learned the original difficult score from New York. When the male producers couldn't assist the female actresses, Mrs. Thurgood was paged to advise them. If you noticed the choreography, the credit goes to Linda Swanson. The stage design, managing lighting and sound were run smoothly by Bill Hunter, Goran Milosevic, Toni Cimarosti and Mike Nageleisen.

Congratulations for an excellent performance by cast and crew.

RATED G

The movie club, in its first year of existence at Walkerville, is indeed rated G. The members are treated to classic feature films starring box office biggies like Charlie Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy and Mickey Mouse. Of course, movies like these cannot be obtained through the National Film Board of Canada. It takes the board a year just to arrange for the showing of "Paddle To The Sea". (That's why you only saw it

ONCE every year in grade school.)

The movie club is indebted to their sponsor, Mr. Atkinson, who made the films available to them from his personal collection.

A hot tip for all movie buffs - Mr. Atkinson is working on "Paddle To The Sea" - he should have it by September. If not, you'll have to settle for a rerun of "Jaws".

A Long Ago and Forgotten Memory

The sun filtered through the blinds on the window and cast a patch of warmth across the bed. The warm feeling of the sun and seeing her sitting amidst an array of brightly coloured flowers reminded me of a once, little girl, and a long ago and perhaps forgotten memory. She smiled brightly as we talked showing no fear of what was about to come. We seemed as one, as we relived her childhood, separated only by the plastic of the oxygen tent. Her words came slowly now, and her breathing had become difficult, but she fought to say the words, that expressed her love, and her life. As she opened her mouth to speak her face went tight and she began choking and gasping for air. She reached out for me, through the shield of plastic, like a child awakening from a nightmare, and my arms went around her, and I held her close and for a short time we sat on a white linen-covered bed, in a white little room. Slowly the warmth from her body faded, and turned her once rosy red cheeks ashen white. Her lips were tinted an icy blue, and her flesh felt cold and smooth, as I gently laid her head upon the pillow. Her face seemed like that of an angel surrounded by thick masses of soft curls. And as I looked upon her, the forgotten memory reoccurred and I saw a little girl, in a lacy white dress, in the middle of a field of white daisies picking the flowers, in the blinding white rays of the sun.

The Street of My Childhood

I looked down at that street
And it seemed something out of a child's play.
A stop sign I'd placed at each corner,
Neat, precise houses with lawns and trees
And streetlights out in front.
There were even "No Parking" signs
With words on them that looked so real
That I almost believed they were.
But then the stoplight changed
And I had to leave that street
Behind.

Why Am I Here?

I wish I knew
Your reason for being Here.
Because it would explain
My being
Also.

The Window

The old window, with its cracked wooden frame
And smeared panes, was the thing she loved most about her home
She would sit quietly on its sill, resting against its Frame, like a child in the arms of its mother,
And would watch eagerly as it revealed to her
The perpetual power of God's Creation.
It opened her eyes, and showed her, as no tale could,
The beauty of the morning sun and the serenity of stars at night.
It showed to her too, the fierceness of the rain, as it
Pounded against its panes causing them to shake with fright.
But most of all it opened her mind, and planted
Within her, thoughts of joy, peace and love.

Ingrid Riegl

Slowly his last day of life began. We awakened momentarily, his mind still in a dream. He recognized me, sitting there beside him, and he smiled weakly. Every happy moment and every pain he had endured in life was worn across his wrinkled face. He spoke of something he believed in, something that was real to him, something that you answer yes to even if the answer's no.

He slept again in that same moment, breathing with every muscle in his tired old body and every breath evolved in memories. The laughing and sneering and cursing and hating and the times I half wished for moments like this. The good times never came back, just the guilty feelings.

Remember Grampa, the time that I ... I'm sorry Grampa. Really very sorry. I wish that I could change that. I wish that...

His eyes reopened. I was someone else to him, I had a different face, a different name now. He took my hand, not knowing who I was and held on as though that was life itself.

His life melted away in those remaining, desperate hours and slowly every organ in his body grew cold.

He died not knowing who I was, thinking I was someone else, I did not exist to him, I was just a shadow. He died in thought of someone else, someone that he loved, clearly thinking she was sitting there, only his eyes were blind. He died in peace of mind and happiness, and I wished that I could bring him back to life, perhaps to live again perhaps to say good-bye.

Shelley Budd

Alone it walks, 'cross the lonely moors. Night after night, year after year it walks. The velvety heather, bending and swaying gracefully under the caressing fingers of the wind reaches to touch its body but it cannot be touched because there is no body. Enveloped within the warming light of the full moon it walks. Is it real or is it just the essence of illusion? Smaller animals of the moor scurry away when they sense its approach, and not even the wolves hesitate to leave. It sometimes moves with the mindless swiftness of a deer, and other times with the slow deliberate tracks of a snail. But whether fast or slow it is not really there. Or is it? Who is to say whether it is alive or dead, real or just the result of some reflected light off a flat shiny, rock? No one. No one can judge it, for it is my soul.

Catherine King-Thomson

Tears

Crying seems to be the thing to do.
He makes you mad, it hurts, you cry.
He says he's sorry, you don't Believe it.
You cry.
Its getting late, he wants to go
You don't want him to
You cry.
Your mom is mad, you look like a fool, nothing you can do so
you cry.
You've had it this time, you're going to tell him it's breaking your heart so,
you cry.
He's saved you the trouble, it's someone new, she's very pretty.
You cry.
You're grown up now
you think how silly
you were, how you thought you loved him -
you cry.

Lisa Gilroy

Wrapped up in myself and the knot's too tight

But that when that day comes, And I do burst,
Nothing will come out.

BEFORE THE WAR

A cool, soothing breeze gently blows in your face, cooling the tiny droplets of sweat rolling down your forehead.

As you sit on the dusty porch, thoughts quickly run through your head.

Suddenly another thought quietly enters your mind. The thought of the forthcoming war.

It's tormenting of innocent families. The anxieties of families whose husbands have been called to fight for their country.

You know that soon this evil will come to your home to destroy everything that comes within reach of its grasping hands.

You're hoping and praying to the Almighty God to have your family's life spared.

Your brain starts to take over and you can't tell make-believe from reality.

You panic, running like a madman through the back alleys, pushing over rank garbage cans.

Suddenly a man appears and slaps your face, telling you to go home and protect your family. Slowly turning back, trying to figure out what caused you to panic.

Looking up at the sky, trying to find an answer, you see dark grey clouds blanketing the sky.

Suddenly you hear a loud and ugly sound that makes your ears ring with pain.

Thinking it was just thunder, you keep on walking until you come to the meadow that used to surround your house.

You slowly open your eyes.

You scream!

DISASTER!! Disaster! disaster!

The Perfect Poem

I wrote the most beautiful poem in the world today.
It came suddenly as I was walking down the street
And continued along my way
Each line fascinating me more,
And telling me I was really expressing a feeling,
Something really profound
That belonged in those thick volumes of literary masterpieces
That gather dust on library shelves
Because nobody opens them,
Or reads them,
Or shares them
The way my poem was meant to be shared.
My poem was so perfect that it would touch everyone
And no one would misunderstand.
They'd all know exactly what I meant
And what I felt.
But before I tried to figure out how such a thing would be possible
I reached my house
And ran for a pen,
And paper,
Just to find
That I'd forgotten my perfect poem.

A REASON TO LIVE

As the fog gradually rolled back toward the sea, the figure of a lone man could be seen silhouetted against the crumbling waterfront buildings. His too large jacket was pulled up over his neck in useless effort to minimize the effect of the harsh blowing wind sweeping in from the sea. In his arms he was carrying a small bundle enclosed in a worn quilt. He quickened his pace as a tiny arm thrust through the quilt followed almost immediately by a blonde curly head. The clear blue eyes looked up at the man inquisitively.

The man broke the dead silence of the dock saying, "Shhh! darling, go back to sleep. Daddy's here. Don't be frightened." He bent his head, gently kissing her on the cheek and giving her a gentle squeeze. As he neared the end of the waterfront district, his eyes began filling with tears. He tried desperately to blink them back.

There were many reasons why he would give his child up, but the most influential was his impending death. His wife was a drunkard. He could not bear the thought of leaving his lovely daughter in the incompetent hands of such a woman. The nearer his final destination became, the weaker his convictions that he was right became. He wanted to keep this smiling face and laughing blue eyes near him until the moment he died. Though his heart urged to go back, his mind prodded him on, never relenting its logical thoughts.

As he mounted the front stairs of the large white house, he was thoroughly convinced this was the right thing to do. His finger lingered momentarily over the doorbell as indecision engulfed him. His love for his three year old daughter won. He wanted the best of everything for her and this was the only way to get it. As his finger pushed the doorbell he knew he had done the right thing. His daughter had always given him a reason to live, now she gave him a reason to die.

WAVES

The waves are so strange.
They don't realize that the sand
They push and pull
Also absorbs.

Mary Ann Kwapisz

IV

Someone I knew has gone far, far away,
To a place I may not soon see.
This place is a sad place,
In this place you're alone,
This is one place where laughter is gone.
If I knew where he was I would meet him,
But then death is not here, nor 'tis there.
So he's now doomed to wander,
To regret and to ponder,
His meager, past life upon earth.

Catherine King-Thomson

XII

As I sit here and ponder the life that I've led,
I think of the many things I should have said.
My innermost feelings, my thoughts, and my whims,
That now seem to be all so distant and dim.
All the answers to questions that bothered me so,
Were hiding inside me and wouldn't let go.
All my loves were a secret, known only to me
Like my ambitions, and longings for what I could be.
But now all that's over, I'm sorry to say,
For this is the end, today's the day.

Catherine King-Thomson

The Metal Bird

As I stood in the blackness of night, on a barren road, on which cars had long since ceased to pass, I watched as a plane descended like a huge bird would descend upon a piece of straw extended from its nest. And I watched in my sorrow the bright, blinding, blinking lights which seemed so cheerful and gay, I thought of the people who inside this bird served as her heart, pounding with the excitement of adventure, and I wondered if with their lives they were truly happy, for I in my sorrow, knew that I was not.

STUDENT ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

This year the SAA again held its annual chocolate bar sale. All the teams were doing fine until the sale when the athletes all gained too much weight to play. However, they used the weight machine purchased from the profits of last year's sale to take off the extra poundage. Now, thanks to the SAA - our teams are functioning again.

It will be talked about for years — how in the autumn months of '75, the Great Toilet Paper shortage descended on Windsor. Every Friday at Windsor Stadium, shifty-eyed Tartan fans sneaked into the gates with bulging pockets to witness their great team in another two hours of Block n' Roll. But, toilet paper is no fun unless you have a team to throw it for (at?) and this year, we had that TEAM. It was lucky for us when Mark Fusco hung up his Brennan Bird Suit and joined forces with the Tartans. Darrell Goertzen averaged over 100 yards per game in rushing this season. Jim Geier got a real kick out of being on the team. All the guys did a great job under the supervision of Mr. Stomp, Mr. Rumble, Mr. Wortley and Mr. Marin who romped and stumbled every night from 4-6 with their team.

What's that grinding noise coming from the weight room after school? No- not a dentist's drill- a wrestler's drill! Yes, it's the bones of the devout W.C.I. wrestlers being bent as they prepare for their meets. Now for a little history of the team: It started out when a few of the guys entered a pretzel-imitation invitational meet. There they discovered their hidden talents for tying people in knots. With a little extra work many qualified for SWOSSA. Ron McNamara would have made it to OFSSA if not for his neck injury (personally, I think someone bit his neck, mistaking him for a yummy pretzel).

SERVICE-

Love may mean nothing on the tennis courts but there's no other word to describe how we feel about this year's team - and that's no backhanded compliment! With the exception of a broken racket and a couple of deflated tennis balls, everyone did a great job. Our own little Jenny Colborne won the all-city singles division, then managed to swing her way past SWOSSA, to OFSSA. Barb Wilkes and Diane Mirkovic also made it to SWOSSA in girls' doubles where they played some matchless tennis. Congratulations to the whole team and to their coach, Mr. Mercer!

This year's curlers were an All Chiefs and No Indians team. That is to say they had no coach. But this didn't stop them from putting together two excellent teams. They boys qualified for SWOSSA under skip Robert Clark and the ladies, with Nancy Bell as skip qualified for SWOSSA also.

Recently Mr. Montour and Mrs. Krenz received a call from the Parks' Department complaining that the sidewalks which border Willistead Park were being eroded at an alarming rate - and their Cross Country teams were accused of this dastardly deed. All their work paid off, especially for the girls' teams which both qualified for SWOSSA and the junior girls, Patti Taylor, Beth Kimmerly, Deb St. Louis and Pat Roy who made it to OFSSA. Pat Taylor had a first in SWOSSA. However, it wasn't just the Cross Country team which was responsible for the wearing down the sidewalks - the hard working Track and Field team did its share too.

Ode to a Cheerleader

The pom-pom on thy running shoes,
The smile on thy face,
Thou little voice that cries "rah-rah",
The flip thee makes with grace,
And how thee always sticks around,
Though we are in last place...

All these things and more made our cheerleaders the NO. 1 squad in Windsor. Yes - the seniors captured the trophy. So long live their motto-Let's SPLIT!

WE'RE REALLY ON THE BEAM!

This year, Walkerville's girls' gymnastics team did not bring home any medals or ribbons or championships, not because we don't have a championship team (far from it).

The reason we have no medals is that we didn't enter the competition. And the reason for that... Well, let it suffice to say that coaches, Mrs. Krenz, Mr. Halper and Mr. Phil Apollonio decided that we needed a bit of time to develop our full potential. Sure, we could have entered the competition and done mediocre routines, but we felt it would be much better to wait until next year when we'd know some superior moves, like front rolls. So, Brennan and Massey beware: We're coming next year (and we're going) to roll over you.

In boy's competition, Phil Specht, the only Walkerville competitor, seized the WSSA senior boy's title with a first in all six events for a total of 48.7 points. All by himself, Phil collected enough points to earn Walkerville the standing 2nd place senior team. Way to go, Phil!

WANTED

men
TO BEFRIEND A FATHERLESS BOY
REWARD

A rich, rewarding experience in life that is unobtainable from any other source. The riches of a thousand worlds would not be as much of an influence as you would be to a fatherless boy. We offer you the chance to develop a lasting friendship that will stay with you for as long as you live.

If you are 21 years or older, single or married and have 8 hours a week for 1 year to devote to such a boy, you're the man we want to know you nothing except, your time and friendship. What you get out of such a program is a chance to help a fatherless boy grow up to be a man.
