AWESOME!

Oh my look at that French Fried Potato

Wasting out of things is important to learn. It's what separates us from the animals. Except the weasel.

You don't win friends with salad!

There is time in life where you just got to settle down

That is why FRENCH FRIED POTATO.

FRENCH FRIED POTATO FRENCH FRIED POTATO FRENCH FRIED POTATO

Do I have anything in my teeth, no really...

Why is "not the Ross" in the picture?

John Wibe is the best FRENCH FRIED POTATO Mrs. Gale has ever taught and ever will teach.

I can look like I am awake even when I am sleeping

It wasn't me... honestly it was the FRENCH FRIED POTATO

I was't me, I swear!

I see not what I said before but I see now it had something to do with a FRENCH FRIED POTATO.

I feel pretty, oh so pretty

Award winners Ross
(for Outstanding Achievement in the Field of Excellence, and because he is just so much smarter than Karin)
And that Mike guy
(the "not the Ross" award winner)

The French Fried Potato is in the potato family and the largest is the F-F-I version. Like most potatoes it has suffered greatly from much exaggeration and scary folklore. The potato is also referred to as a potato phonetically puh-toe. The potato is supported by its tendency to grow in dirt, lots and lots of dirt. Dirty, dirt, dirt. Potatoes are not viviparous and thus do not give birth to live young. The potato at full adulthood is truly a natural wonder and is really one of the most impressive vegetables alive. It is however never quite happy until it becomes a French Fried Potato.

Raindrops in a Storm

*Before it's here
The air is filled with dread
A melancholy silence*

*It's only fear
That makes the world feel dead
So ignorant to violence*

*It's getting close
And it can find you fast
While trapped in human form*

*The tears of those
Who learned to veil their past
Are raindrops in a storm*

Marina Trosh

An Afternoon with Monet

*Water reflects like a mirror
every jewel-toned daub;*

*Summer sunshine brushes
blushing faces;*

*Boat waits patiently
in still life;*

*Listen through the silence
to hear the gentle rattle
of white muslin
in the Rowing Boat.*

Cold Food

Her smile was stale, her actions course like the bread. Dinner was just a formality. She raised her wine glass to hide her scowl. Pass the potatoes. Work was fine, school was fine, life was fine. Where's the salt?

Her teeth ground the tension from her body into a morsel of beef. How's your mother? She fed the bones to the scavenger under the table. Don't eat the gravy dear, too many calories. She helped herself to seconds. Pass the butter. Her eyes began to squint as she stared into the corner, trying to pass the time. Dinner would not end soon enough. Who wants dessert? The smoke curled up from her cigarette. It went well with the wine. She finished her dessert.

Are you staying?
She did not want to chat. Her smile was stale again.
So was mine.

Kristen Hill

Your Private Euphoria

YOU held a sturdy straw - a heavy straw, strong enough to slurp up a crushed ice frozen sometimes I think I am pinpointing just where YOU impregnated MY thoughts, thus scattering them they are now hidden under folds of skin and under shadow-twist and darkened-corner of something a flashlight might be useful on and once YOU sucked hard and tired ME out I fell in a pile on the floor and there YOU thought YOU had ME where you wanted me good and uniform and yes sir-ing YOU to YOUR own private euphoria. till a friend lent ME his steel toe boots and I gave you one good bone cracking kick out the door and bolted it with three locks now I undergo spirit revitalization to exorcise YOUR hate outa me, clean you outa me, and make ME whole again a feather flying in the air, or golden ray of sunshine - warming the freckled noses of playing children.

Ivana Vidrich

Only Human

He sits entranced before the monitor, his pale face bathed in its electric blue light. His fingers dance with vigor over the cool keys. The only sound in the room emanates from his machine: a faint metallic whir. A shrill voice pierces the silence, jolting him from his trance. He blinks hard for the first time in hours, and reathes in the stale air. Stretching, he reaches to turn off the computer, and the blood begins to flow through his face and hands at a healthier rate. He pulls away from the screen and walks to the opposite side of the room. When he opens the door, a brilliant orange light spills into the room. This only lasts for an instant until he shuts the door behind him. In the room he has left, the blue hue of the monitor fades, and the robotic whirring becomes softer, and softer, until the space is silent and dark. It's dinner time.

Rory O'Connor

Stan

Tara moaned, annoyed, as Stan began his usual speech. She was late for school. Her mother had slept out again and she'd had to get her brothers ready for school. Anxiously awaiting the bus, she watched as he took his usual position on the busy sidewalk outside the drug store. Stan was tall middle-aged man. His clothes were old and tattered. His brown corduroys were about an inch too short and worn at the knees. His t-shirt was too tight and in faded letters on his left breast were the words: "Church of St. Francis - Volunteer." A mesh baseball cap was permanently perched atop his head, shadowing his softened face.

Tara was disgusted. She wondered how a man his age could possibly have the time and the audacity to stand on the street and rant all day long. She was repulsed by the way he held his head so high and desperately tried to force his beliefs on complete strangers. His deep voice boomed warning of the Hellish horrors of sinning and the sanctuary that is Jesus Christ. Tara cringed and turned toward the street in hopes that her bus was on its way. It wasn't. She turned again to watch Stan. She watched as he approached busy citizens with an outstretched hand and a warm grin. She watched as people breezed by him, hardly acknowledging his existence, and she watched the people point and laugh and whisper. Still Stan persisted and Tara was enthralled.

She watched as Stan approached a teenage boy. The boy tried his best to ignore him but with a wide smile he seemed to say something that caught the boy's attention. The teenager turned toward him and sneered. Stan leaned in close to the boy's face and whispered something. The boy backed up defensively and walked briskly away. He yelled a profane and blasphemous statement and rushed past Tara. Stan looked disappointed, but not disheartened, as he made eye contact with her. His eyes were deep and dark and Tara felt a sickly feeling in the pit of her stomach.

"May I help you?" She asked sarcastically.

"No, no Miss," said Stan as he approached Tara with a confident and leisurely stride. "I'm going to help you."

Tara looked, again, to the street, and again there was no sign of the bus. She sighed.

"What?"

It began. He rambled on about his religious teaching. Tara nodded and rolled her eyes accordingly. Impatiently and repeatedly she glanced toward the street, desperately searching for a way out.

"It's alright, dear. You'll be just fine." Stan said with a smile as he sympathetically placed a hand upon her shoulder. Tara shrugged his hand away and looked toward the ground. Stan strolled back to his usual spot on the busy sidewalk outside the drug store and continued his sermon. Tara felt a strange warmth within her, and as the bus approached, wondered if he was right.

A note from WCCA.

It is with great sadness that I am writing my last letter outlining this past year's WCCA activities. I am retiring as the WCCA Program Director after 14 years (and after 33 years of teaching). The year 2003/03 was a very memorable year for WCCA. This was the last year for OAC courses. WCCA students completed a marvellous cultural exchange with G. Marinelli School in Codroipo, Italy; the dance department put on many shows including their fabulous Artistic Endeavours; the piano department welcomed one of Canada's most famed contemporary pianists to Walkerville-M. Andre LaPlante; the vocal department spearheaded a memorable trip to Quebec by participating in the Montreal Music Festival (48 students went on this great 5 day trip), the art department hosted the first alumni students and graduating seniors art exhibit at the Arts Council Gallery; and the drama department staged the most successful and artistic musical production ever in this city-Les Miserables!!! It was an incredible year! I wish to thank every student-especially the seniors for their making this such a great program. Thank you Ms. Maynard, Ms. Brode, Ms. Robinson, Mr. Lewsaw, Mr. Ross, Mr. Allison, Ms. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Wiebe, Mr. Ingratta, Ms. Zarlenga, Ms. Fitzpatrick, Ms. Preston, Ms. Simone, Ms. Beneteau, Ms. Plourde, Mr. Mazotta, Ms. Shuker and of course the office staff and administration.

I have to count my blessings, because I have been lucky enough to return to Walkerville CI- my alma mater- and to be a part of such an exciting, successful, and educational experiment-WCCA. I wish both WCI and WCCA students continued success. Some of the highlights (and there are many) would include the first musical- West Side Story, seeing Tamia achieve artistic and professional success, watching Melissa Williams go from Star Search to an amazing dance and movie career, seeing Craig Ramsay act and dance in big time productions in Canada and the US; and all of the other success stories in the performing arts. I was ecstatic to hear the Kagan McLeod, Vlad Forfutinov and Chris Lawson were leading the way to success in the art and graphics fields. I enjoyed the informal conversations with students-who always amazed and impressed me with their wit, talent, creativity and their warm hearts-I will miss them. The host of field trips in Europe (London, Paris, Bruges, Amsterdam, Salzburg, Lucern, St. Etienne, Vienna, Venice, Florence, Rome, Athens, Olympia, Mycenae, Delphi and the Greek Islands); USA (New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Washington, Philadelphia) and Canada (Victoria, the Rockies, Vancouver, Banff, Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec City) were all very special for me.

I wish you all the best; and may I see you on day on a beautiful beach in Greece enjoying a cold glass of lemonade!! Yia sas!

With fondness,
 Mr. V

Prime Minister's Farewell

(Raewyn's Last Address)

Well Walkerville, what an adventure highschool has been! Looking back on the past 5 years here is crazy. So much has happened, and it all seemed to go by so quickly. If the rest of life goes by like this, I'm in big trouble! To all my friends leaving with me, I hope our time here was as interesting and fulfilling as mine. And to all those coming up, please remember to get involved as much as possible! It is totally worth it, I promise. I want to say thank you to my two hardest workers on Agora, Jill Conlon and my right hand, Jeremy Ing. You'll do great kiddo! Thanks to all the teachers who have helped me along the way, with and without Agora. Mrs. Clark, you're an angel, you too Mrs. Muscedere! And special thanks to Joel (you know who you are). You have been my friend and mentor! I love you all! Goodnight and have a pleasant tomorrow!

Raewyn Mahew
Prime Minister

Walkerville Collegiate Institute provides a unique and diverse learning experience to you, the students. Nothing illustrates this better than the annual yearbook, which provides witness to the many activities and events which make up your Secondary School experience. As you view the yearbook, alone or with friends and family, you will have your own memory of the events that have transpired throughout the year. Later, you will look back and remember the friends, teachers, coaches, and community that helped to shape your life. I hope that your memories are fond ones, and I would like to thank the students, staff, and community of Walkerville for the opportunity to share an enjoyable year with you.

Special thanks go to Mr. Allison and his media class for their work on the cover design and divider pages. Their successful combination of creativity and technical expertise have produced a unique look for the 2002/03 yearbook. Also deserving of many thanks is Neil Palesh, the layout editor, for being almost single-handedly responsible for the computer layout of the entire book. He was also quite involved in the advertising campaign that was launched by Ms. Gale's Grade 9 Business class. Lastly, thank you to the editor, Jess Parks.

For those of you returning in the fall, I look forward to seeing you all then. For our graduates and those who are moving on in other areas I wish you the best in the pursuit of your dreams.

Sincerely,

Mr. Antaya, Principal

"It is the supreme act of the teacher to awaken joy in artistic expression and knowledge."

Albert Einstein

Where better than at Walkerville do students experience the joy in the arts and in knowledge? When I arrive each morning I experience the excitement and sounds in the WCCA program. As my day progresses I see students helping each other with homework or with a problem, see classes always with the energy and enthusiasm that comes with learning and at the end of the day I see and hear students honing their skills on a basketball court or a soccer field.

As you look at the pages of this yearbook you will remember the joys and tears of this past year. You have learned many things both in and out of the classroom. You have experienced the grief of losing a friend, the sorrow of a fellow student battling cancer as well as the joys of making and renewing friendships. As you participated in extra-curricular activities such as sports, dances, clubs, and Les Miserables, you have learned the value of teamwork, of setting and achieving goals and of friendships.

Once again Tartans have excelled in academics, in athletics and the arts. These accomplishments are a result of a great deal of hard work on the part of students, teachers, parents and volunteers. We appreciate the contributions you have made to Walkerville.

A special thank you to Mrs. Baldo, Jess Parks and the yearbook committee for their hard work in putting together this yearbook.

Over the years you will return time and again to this yearbook and will realize that Walkerville awakened you to joy in artistic expression and knowledge.

Congratulations to all graduating students. May you enjoy success and happiness always.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Misener, Vice Principal

In Loving Memory

Shelley Ann Raymond

Some mistakes are just too fun
to only make once.

If I had the letters "HRT"
I could add "EA" to get "HEART"
or "U" to get "HURT"
I'd rather use "U" to get "HURT"
than have a "HEART" without "U".

4 every minute "U" spend angry
"U" lose 60 seconds of happiness.

True friends are hard to find,
difficult to leave
and impossible to "4 GET".
